

Third Graders Celebrate Creativity and Gratitude with Frindle

Our third graders recently enjoyed an exciting literary adventure with Frindle by Andrew Clements. The story of Nick Allen and his creative journey to invent a new word sparked lively discussions about language and the power of ideas. Students eagerly shared their reflections, making our reading time both engaging and memorable.

To conclude our Frindle unit, students participated in two meaningful projects inspired by the book. First, they invented their own new words, complete with definitions and examples. Like Nick, they dreamed of their words one day becoming part of the dictionary. Their originality and enthusiasm were truly impressive!

Our second project was a heartfelt one. The students wrote touching letters to teachers who have made a difference in their lives. In these letters, they expressed gratitude and shared specific ways their teachers had positively impacted them. The letters were filled with sincere appreciation and thoughtful details, and they deeply touched the hearts of the teachers who received them. It was a beautiful reminder of the lasting influence teachers have on their students, and we are incredibly proud of the care and attention the students put into their writing.

As Proverbs 3:27 reminds us, "Do not withhold good from those to whom it is due, when it is in your power to act." Our third graders embodied this verse as they honored their teachers with words of kindness and appreciation.

Through Frindle, our students expanded their vocabularies while learning valuable lessons about creativity, persistence, and gratitude. We are so proud of their enthusiasm and heartfelt efforts. It is a joy to see them grow as learners and as thoughtful, caring individuals. May their example inspire us all to share our gratitude and celebrate the power of words to make a difference.
