

CLAPPING OUT CHOICES IN MUSIC CLASS

Our students had a blast in music class this week as they combined rhythm practice with a fun game of Would You Rather?. Each question presented two silly scenarios, and once students chose their side, they clapped the corresponding rhythm four times. With ten rounds of questions, the room was filled with energy, laughter, and the steady sound of students clapping and counting together.

While the game was lighthearted, it also gave students the chance to sharpen their skills with different rhythmic patterns and combinations. By practicing these rhythms in a playful setting, students built confidence, focus, and teamwork –all while having fun.

This activity reflects the heart of our CALLED vision for learning. Students were challenged to think critically as they read and clapped rhythms, encouraged to take action in their choices, and engaged with one another as they worked together to stay steady. Through both focus and fun, they discovered that discipline and creativity go hand in hand.

It's true—combining the challenge of rhythm patterns with a fun game is always a win in music class!
